The Electoral College: 270 to Win

Olin B. Sansbury, retired USC Upstate Chancellor

Tuesday, March 17, Noon

U.S. presidential elections are determined by how the popular vote is distributed through the prism of the Electoral College. Voters need to understand and appreciate the institution's impact. Olin Sansbury, who has taught government and international studies courses for several decades, will describe the institution's history and explain how it functions in today's world.
